

Tuesday

10 March

Critics' choice

Just another brick in what wall? Anna and Grace

Pick of the day

Kids In Camps (BBC1, 10.45pm)

Exactly a week ago in this slot, No Place To Call Home put its focus on children as it illuminated Londoners' housing problems. Now this Comic Relief film by the same director, Jezza Neumann, uses the tactic even more effectively to reveal the refugee crisis caused by South Sudan's civil war, as we meet four teenagers (three aged 14, one 17) displaced by the conflict: Anna and her older sister, Grace, staying in a camp in South Sudan; and John and Scovia, who are in temporary settlements over the border in Uganda.

As in the earlier documentary (or indeed Lyse Doucet's film about displaced Syrian children), the kids have gripes about their living conditions, but it is their worries about having to change or miss school that are especially striking — Grace, who wants to be a doctor, makes a dangerous journey to Kenya to try to get her education back on track. David Tennant provides the voiceover.

JOHN DUGDALE